The Pool of Flame

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright 1909, by Louis Joseph Vance SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The story opens at Monte Carlo with Col. Terence O'Rourke in his hotel. O'Rourke, a military free lance and something of a gambler, is dressing for appearance in the restaurant below when the sound of a girlish voice singing attracts his attention. Leaning out on the balcony he sees a beautiful girl who suddenly disappears. He rushes to the corridor to see a neatly gowned form enter the elevator and pass from sight.

CHAPTER II.—O'Rourke's mind is filled with thoughts of the girl, and when he goes to the gaming table he allows his remarkable winnings to accumulate indifferently. He notices two men watching him. One is the Hon. Bertie Glynn, while his companion is Viscount Des Trebes, a noted duelist. When O'Rourke leaves the table the viscount tells him he represents the French government and that he has been directed to O'Rourke as a man who would undertake a secret mission.

CHAPTER III.—At his room O'Rourke, who had agreed to undertake the mission, awaits the viscount. O'Rourke finds a mysterious letter in his apartment. The viscount arrives, hands a sealed package to O'Rourke, who is not to open it until on the ocean. He says the French government will pay O'Rourke 25,000 francs for his services. A pair of dainty slippers are seen protruding from under doorway curtain and the viscount charges O'Rourke with having a spy secreted there.

CHAPTER IV.—When the Irishman goes to his room he finds there the owner of the mysterious letter. It is his wife, Bertie, from whom he had run away a year previous. They are reconciled, and opening the letter he had received, he finds that the French government offers him 100,000 pounds for an Indian jewel known as the Pool of Flame and left to him by a dying friend. O'Rourke tells his wife that it is in the keeping of a friend named Chambret in Algeria.

CHAPTER V.—O'Rourke is forced to fight a duel with the viscount. The arrogant nobleman is worsted in the combat and acts the poltroon.

CHAPTER VI.—The loyal wife bids O'Rourke farewell and he promises to soon return with the reward offered for the Pool of Flame. He discovers both Glynn and the viscount on board the ship which takes him to Algeria.

CHAPTER VII.—Chambret has left Algeria and O'Rourke has to gain a military detachment going across the desert to reach his friend. As he finds the latter there is an attack by bandits and Chambret is shot.

CHAPTER VIII.—Chambret dies telling O'Rourke that he has left the Pool of Flame with the governor general of Algeria. He gives the colonel a signet ring at the sight of which he says the official will deliver the jewel.

CHAPTER IX.—O'Rourke is attacked by Glynn and the viscount who ransack his luggage, but he worsts them in the conflict.

The Honorable Bertie, O'Rourke discovered kneeling in the act of turning the adventurer's traveling gear inside out; at least, he seemed to be trying to do so. Monsieur le Viscount des Trebes on the contrary was seated at ease, facing O'Rourke, a revolver on the cushion beside him, his interest concentrated not upon his captive, upon his collaborator. O'Rourke remarked an expression on the Frenchman's face, a curious compound of eagerness, triumph and apprehension. Without noting the Irishman's ejaculation, he addressed Glynn: "Find it?"

"No—worse luck!" grumbled the Englishman, rising and kicking the hand-bag savagely. "There isn't so much as a scrap of paper anywhere about him."

The viscount favored O'Rourke with a vicious glance, muttering something about a thousand devils. The Irishman, quick to grasp the situation and inwardly exulting, acknowledged Des Trebes' attention with a winning smile.

"Good evening," he said, and nodded amiably.

"Oh, shut up!" snapped the Honorable Bertie, unhandsonely. "Where's that letter?"

O'Rourke chuckled. "Ye're a hard loser, me bright young friend," he commented. "I thought Englishmen always played the game as it laid."

Glynn grunted and flushed, shame-faced, but the Frenchman cut short the retort on his lips by a curt repetition of Glynn's own question:

"Where's that letter, monsieur?"

O'Rourke glanced at him languidly, yawned, and smiled an exasperatingly strictly personal smile. Then significantly he clinked the handcuffs until they rang on wrist and ankle.

"Answer me!" snarled the viscount, picking up his revolver.

"Divine a word," observed O'Rourke, "will ye get from me if ye shoot me dead, monsieur le viscount. Put down your pistol and be sensible."

Des Trebes' face darkened, suffused with the blood of his rage. Yet the man asserted that admirable control of self which he was able to employ when it suited his purposes. Evidently, too, he recognized the cold common-sense of the wanderer's remark. At all events he put aside the weapon.

"Where's the letter?" he demanded again, more pacifically.

Again O'Rourke yawned with malicious premeditation, deliberately and exhaustively and dispassionately.

"Not a word," he volunteered at length, "until ye loose me hands and feet. Which," he added, "ye need not hesitate to do, for I'll not strike back—unless ye crowd me."

The viscount scowled darkly for a moment, plainly dubious. Then presumably upon the consideration that he could trust O'Rourke's word and that most assuredly he would learn nothing from him until his request was complied with, he growled an order to Glynn to unlock and remove the handcuffs. The Englishman obeyed.

Free, O'Rourke stretched himself, rubbed his wrists, and observed a collection of his pocket hardware—lying upon the seat by him, thrown aside by Glynn in his disgust at not finding what he sought.

"Ye'll not be wanting to deprive me of these few trifles, me gay highwaymen, I'm thinking?" he inquired placidly of the pair. "If ye've no objection I'll make so free as to take back me own."

"Take what you want," returned Des Trebes in an ugly tone. "But—I give you three minutes to tell me where you have put that letter."

"Indeed? Your courtesy overpowers me." The Irishman took up his watch and calmly made a note of the hour—hard upon three in the morning; then, with easy nonchalance stowed it away with the rest of the miscellaneous collection—the knives, coins and keys, his wallet, tickets and so forth.

"Your time," the voice of the viscount interrupted this occupation, "is up." He fingered his revolver "Where is that letter? I am losing patience."

"Where rust nor moth cannot corrupt nor thieves break in to steal," O'Rourke misquoted solemnly. "Steady. Don't call names—or I'll forget myself. I mean that the letter is in fragments, scattered to the four winds of heaven, destroyed. There ye have your answer. Ye fools, did ye think I would carry it about me?"

"By God!" said Glynn tensely. "No—don't shoot him, Des Trebes! He's telling the truth. Make him tell what was in the letter."

"I'm afraid 'tis useless," O'Rourke mocked them. "I have forgotten the contents. What use to me to remember?" he demanded, inspired.

"What made ye think I would have it at all? Sure, and the letter was properly Chambret's. Why would I not turn it over to him?"

"Oh, cut it!" Glynn interrupted impatiently. "We know he's dead. The news was helleographed in from the column day before yesterday."

"Quite so. Yet, if ye know so much, if—as I gather—ye suspect that Chambret turned over this precious jewel to me, why do ye not demand it as well as the letter? Not that I have either."

"Because we jolly well know you haven't got the ruby," blurted the Englishman.

"Be quiet!" snapped the viscount. "Quite right," echoed O'Rourke with assumed indignation. "Be quiet, Bertie. Children should be seen and not heard. Mind your uncle." And, "Oh!" he commented to himself. "And they knew I didn't have the Pool of Flame! Let me think. . . . Oh, faith, 'tis just bluffing they are!"

"You say," the viscount continued slowly and evenly, "you've destroyed the letter."

O'Rourke took up pipe and tobacco. "I told ye," he replied, filling the bowl, "that the letter was non-existent. Now, me man," he continued, "drop an imperceptible change of tone, 'drop the bluff. Turn that pistol away from

ALL DRUGGISTS 11-19

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a hollow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple way for any family to retain the good health of all its members

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., and Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City. Thousands of others of both sexes have written to Dr. Caldwell telling of gratifying results. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 402 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

THEATRICAL.

"THE GAMBLERS."

"The Gamblers" will be the attraction at the Paris Grand on next Tuesday, January 23. This excellently constructed and magnificently produced drama by Charles Klein recorded the longest run of any serious play produced in New York last season, remaining at Maxine Elliott's Theatre for over two hundred consecutive performances.

The story of the play has to do with Wilbur Emerson, a young and ambitious speculator, who has been made manager of the Emerson chain of banks. He is guilty of misusing the funds in his effort for expansion and is trapped by the Federal authorities. One of the directors turns State's evidence and delivers certain incriminating notes to the Federal Attorney's house. But at this point another big interest enters, Emerson's efforts by theft to regain possession of these notes, especially to shield his father, the bank's president, who has been deceived in the whole operation, involves the young man with the lawyer's wife and stirs his jealous suspicions of her.

It is in this situation where Catherine Darwin finds herself forced to decide whether her duty is in giving the notes to her husband or in attempting to shield the man whom it is the lawyer's legal duty to prosecute. She refuses finally to assist her husband, but under provocation which makes her conduct reasonable. The evidence eventually reaches the lawyer's hands and the final curtain falls with the certainty of a prison sentence for the wild cat financier, but the steps by which the denouement is reached is full of surprises and dramatic suspense.

FRANCIS WILSON.

Any one who can make us laugh these days is always welcome in our midst, therefore, the announcement that the popular comedian, Francis Wilson, is to be seen at Lexington in his own comedy farce, "The Bachelor's Baby," is one that will please all classes of playgoers for the play has the qualities to amuse the old and young alike. There is laughter in "The Bachelor's Baby," some tears, bright dialogues, very amusing scenes and there is a well told straightforward story. "The Bachelor's Baby" tells a story of a bachelor who hates children. His brother and the latter's wife are lost at sea and the bachelor falls heir to their little daughter, whose heart she wins long before he is himself aware of it. Incidentally there is a love story woven into the comedy which has become very entangled on account of the hero's pronounced ideas in regard to children. This, too, is straightened out by the little girl and so the comedy ends to the satisfaction of everyone. Charles Frohman presents Francis Wilson in "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Lexington Opera House January 17.

Carlisle Has Curfew Law.

The city of Carlisle now has an ordinance requiring all boys under the age of 16 to get off the street at nine o'clock each night, at which time the curfew will ring a warning. Such an ordinance would no doubt prove of great benefit in Paris, where the youngsters are permitted to run the streets at all hours of the night.

Grand Opera at Lexington.

It is a long time since Kentucky has been treated to a performance of grand opera in English, and consequently the coming of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company to Lexington, following its highly successful engagements in Louisville and Cincinnati, is creating widespread interest in this part of the State.

The company will give three performances at the Lexington Opera House on Monday and Tuesday, January 22 and 23, embracing a repertoire of three operas of widely different character, and by three different composers. Offenbach's famous opera comique, "The Tales of Hoffman," which was one of the most decided successes of Hammerstein's memorable career at the Manhattan Opera House in New York, will be given as the initial offering Monday night, Verdi's immortal "Il Trovatore," one of the most richly melodious and universally popular works of all times, will occupy the Tuesday matinee.

Puccini's masterpiece, "Madam Butterfly," probably the greatest work of any living composer, and one about which residents of this part of the country have heard a great deal without having an opportunity to see and hear it before, will be given for the third performance on Tuesday night.

The Aborn forces number one hundred singers and musicians altogether in its double cast, large chorus and grand opera orchestra, and carries several carloads of scenery, costumes and effects. The double cast arrangement includes two sets of principal artists, who alternate with one another, each singer appearing at only four performances of each week. The entire array of talent will be heard during the three performances in Lexington, some at one performance and others at another, including Edith Helena, Jane Abercrombie, Elaine De Sellem, Zoe Fulton, Leonars Samoloff, Domenico Russo, Louis Kreidler, Morton Adkins, William Schusters, Phillip Fein and others, with Carlo Nicotia as conductor.

On account of the many inquiries Manager Scott, of the Lexington Opera House has received concerning this event, he has decided to inaugurate a special system for the filling of mail orders from music lovers in the cities and towns within convenient distance of Lexington, and the orders are coming in rapidly from many points within a radius of thirty or forty miles of that city. All mail orders should be accompanied by money orders for the required amount of seats specified, made out to Charles Scott, Manager, Lexington Opera House, Lexington, Ky.

The price for seats at the two evening performances will be $2 and $1.50 on the lower floor, and $1.50, $1 and 75 cents in the balcony, while those for the Tuesday matinee will be $1.50 and $1 on the lower floor, and $1, 75 and 50 cents in the balcony.

Cold Weather Hurtful to Stock.

The extremely cold weather which has prevailed in Bourbon county for several days, is working a hardship on the farmers according to reports. The farmers are greatly worried because of the shortage of feed, now that the weather is such that feeding has to be done daily. Except where farmers have silos and barn room for their animals, live stock is suffering greatly from the freezing weather, but to this date no deaths have been reported.

Closing Out Cloth Suits!

We Have Given Marching Orders to All Our High-Grade Exclusive Garments Remaining From Our Great Final Adjustment Sale and Priced Them, for Quick Selling, as follows:

All $25 and $30 Suits, now $10.00

Suits formerly up to $50; now $17.50

Suits formerly up to $100, now $25.00

A limited number of Cloth Suits remain from the fast selling of our Great Final Adjustment Sale and we have decided to close every one of them out at a mere fraction of the former prices. While the quantity is somewhat limited, the range of style and fabrics is still broad and embraces some of the most distinguished and exclusive models we have shown this season.

A glance at the items above will show how we have fractured prices. Profits, regular values and even actual cost, played a minor role, the chief consideration being a quick and absolute clean-up.

These unprecedentedly reduced prices place within EVERYBODY'S reach the highest type of women's suits this country produces—apparel which by its distinguished exclusiveness, its ultra-smartness and its absolute perfection and superiority has become the unrivalled favorite of the best dressed women in this section. That magnificent $50 or $100 suit you admired here earlier in the season but could not, perhaps, afford, is now yours for the paltry sum of $17.50 or $25. And plenty of $25 and $30 suits may be had for only $10 if your purse runs that way.

Harvey Stock a Good Company.

As a general rule the so-called popular priced Stock Companies, or "week shows" which play this city, changing their bill each night are not of the best theatrical talent, which of course cannot be expected at the low price of 10, 20 and 30 cents. The Harvey Stock Company, which is playing at the Grand Opera House this week, is an exception to the rule.

Those who attended the performance last night were agreeably surprised to find a first class company playing in first class plays, well balanced and without the usual horseplay and strained situations which the average stock companies deem so necessary. The costumes are new and good and enough scenery is used to give a production far above the average of even the majority of one night stands.

The bill for tonight is "Under Arizona Skies," and a performance of more than usual merit is guaranteed. Secure your seats at Mitchell & Blakemore's and avoid the rush at the box office.

Elects Officers.

The Kentucky Midland Medical Society, in session in this city, elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. C. G. Daugherty, of Paris.

Vice President—Dr. L. C. Redmon, of Lexington.

Secretary and Treasurer—Dr. Chas. C. Garr, of Lexington.

The society took cognizance of the fact that a malpractice suit had been instituted against Dr. W. B. McClure, of Bourbon county, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressing confidence of the society in his integrity and skill. The society was entertained at an elaborate dinner by the members of the profession of this city. The following program was carried out:

Pellagra—Dr. S. L. Beard, Shelbyville. Discussion opened by Dr. F. H. Clark, Lexington.

Hygodermatic Medication—Dr. C. G. Daugherty, of Paris. Discussion opened by Dr. C. E. Wells, of Cynthiana.

Two Unusual Obstetrical Cases—Dr. R. Julia Estill, Lexington.

Post Occipital Presentations in Premipara—Dr. L. T. Mannish, Frankfort.

The discussion of the papers of Drs. Estill and Mannish was opened by Dr. Henry E. Tuley, of Louisville.

Burley Society Given Decision.

Despite the opinion of Judge Howard C. Hollister, of the United States District Court in Cincinnati, that the contracts made by the Burley Tobacco Society of Kentucky with the E. O. Eshelby Tobacco Company, of Covington, were in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, a jury in the case Friday night rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant Burley Tobacco Society, refusing damages, for which the plaintiff, the E. O. Eshelby Company, was suing in the sum of $196,000.

This action was brought as the result of the purchase of tobacco at Winchester in 1907 by the Eshelby Company, for which the price of 17 cents a pound was paid, and which price the plaintiff declared in a petition was in excess of what it should have been because of the fact that the Burley Tobacco Society controlled the crop of that year.

me. Well I know that ye won't shoot, for if ye did ye would put beyond your reach forever the information that would win ye the reward—always providing ye had got possession of the ruby, be hook or crook. 'Twould be crooks, I'm thinking."

He lit a match and applied the flame to the tobacco. "There's me last word on the subject," he added indistinctly, puffing and eyeing the pair through the cloud of smoke.

The revolver waved in the vicomte's hand; he was livid with passion and disappointed, yet amenable to reason. Glynn bent and whispered briefly in his ear, and the Frenchman, nodding acquiescence, laid aside his weapon. The Honorable Bertie continued to advise with him in whispers until O'Rourke, though quite at loss to understand this phase of the affair, saw that their attention was momentarily diverted and, with a swift movement, leaned over, snatched up the revolver and, with a flit of his hand, flung it out of the window.

Glynn started back with an oath, his hand going toward his pocket; but O'Rourke promptly closed with him. A breath later a second pistol was ejected from the carriage and the Englishman was sprawling over the knees of the vicomte.

They disengaged themselves and, mad with rage, started up to fall upon and exterminate the wanderer. I think it must have been the very impertinence of his attitude that made them pause in doubt, for he had resumed his seat as calmly as though nothing at all had happened and was pulling soberly at his pipe. As they hesitated he removed the latter from his lips and gestured airily with the stem. "Sit ye down," he invited them, "and take it easy, me dear friends. The mischief's done, and naught that ye can do will repair it. Faith, I said I'd not strike back unless ye crowded me. I remember me words to the letter. Your guns made a crowd out of this happy retinue. I've merely dispensed with them; I call ye both to witness that ye have neither of ye suffered. Sure, I'm as peaceable as any lamb. Sit down, sit ye down and take it like little men. The situation's unchanged, save that I've put temptation out of your reach."

And as they wavered, plainly of two minds, O'Rourke clinched the argument of his attitude. "I beg to call your attention," he remarked, "to the fact that ye have left me own brace of revolvers here at me feet, when ye so joyously turned me bag inside out. I'm not touching them, mind ye, but mind ye further: I'll brook no nonsense. If ye make a move as if to attack me, I'll . . . There! That's much better. Wise lads, ye are, both of ye: graceful in defeat. Let me see: We've a long ride together, though ye did come uninvited. I trust ye will help me beguile the tedium with society chatter, me friend," with a twinkle at the discomfited vicomte. "I'm in danger of forgetting me manners. Pardon me, I pray, but—but I trust your nose is convalescing?"

In high feather with himself, O'Rourke entertained his companions with a running fire of pleasantries for the balance of the darkened hours. And he touched both more than once with the rapier-point of his wit and irony, and had the pleasure of seeing both squirm in impotent rage. They cut wretched figures, two against one, yet failures, while he taunted them in one breath, with the next declared himself their captive. Toward the end the reserve which the vicomte imposed upon the Honorable Bertie was worn down; the Englishman turned with raw nerves upon his tormentor.

"You damned ass!" he stammered, all but incoherent. "You sit there and—and gloat, damn you! When all the time we've got the upper hand!"

"Be quiet!" interposed the vicomte. "I won't!" raged the honorable. "He thinks himself so infernally clever! What 'dyou say, ye Irish braggart, if I told you you'd never see the Pool of Flame again?"

"I'd say," returned O'Rourke, "that you were either lying or a fool. In either case a fool. If, as ye seem to be trying to make me believe—which I don't for one instant—ye have succeeded in stealing the Pool of Flame, I'll hunt the pair of ye to the ends of the earth, if need be."

He eyed them reflectively during a moment or two made interesting by Glynn's desperate attempts to blurt out indiscretions against the prohibition of the vicomte: something which the older man enforced crudely by clapping his hand across the Englishman's mouth, as well as by whispering savagely in his ear.

"But there'll be no need," continued the Irishman, when Glynn was calm. "Let's consider the matter dispassionately, presupposing that ye have the stone. Well, what then? Ye dare not attempt to sell it—it would result in instant detection. It would not pay ye to have it secretly cut up into smaller stones—the loss in value would be stupendous, the whole not worth your while, as I say. Ye cannot take the Pool of Flame (don't get excited: I'm not going to tell ye where) to claim the reward, for ye don't know where to go. 'Tis a white elephant it would be on your hands." "It does not seem to strike monsieur that there are other ways of finding out who offers the reward," the vicomte suggested icily.

"I can see ye wandering around asking somebody please to relieve ye of the Pool of Flame and pay ye a commission. I wonder how long ye think ye'd last. But 'tis no use trying to hoodwink me: I don't believe one word ye say. I'll wait until I find out the truth before I bother meself with ye."

Will Move to Bourbon.

The Mt. Sterling Gazette says: "Turney Patton, formerly of this city, has sold his interest in the dry goods firm of Patton & Talbott, at Carlisle, to his brother, James Patton and about February 1 will move to his farm in Bourbon county."

Funeral of Judge Russell Mann.

The funeral services over the remains of Judge Russell Mann were held in the Christian church Saturday afternoon. The impressive service was conducted by Elder J. T. Sharrard in the presence of a large assemblage of friends of the deceased who had gathered to pay their last tribute to the memory of this excellent man.

Before the reading of the Scriptural selection by Elder Sharrard the choir rendered four beautiful selections, "In the Hour of Trial," "When Peace, Like a River," "Asleep in Jesus," and "Shall We Gather at the River."

Dr. B. M. Shive, pastor of the Presbyterian church offered a prayer, when Elder Sharrard, in eloquent terms, paid a high tribute to the life and character of Judge Mann as a citizen, soldier, lawyer and official, as a Christian gentleman, a faithful officer of the church and devoted husband and father.

At the close of Elder Sharrard's address Capt. Ed. Taylor, in whose company Judge Mann served during the Civil War, and eight of his comrades, C. J. Clarke, Allen Kiser, James McDonald, Ed. Rice, L. P. Young, L. J. Fretwell, Buckner Woodford and J. Harry Holt surrounded the casket while Capt. Taylor read the beautiful confederate burial service.

The body was then turned over to the Masons of which order the deceased had long been a member and Acting Grand Master Charles A. McMillan conducted the impressive ceremonies of the order.

A large concourse followed the body to the Paris cemetery where it was placed in the vault, as the family contemplates the erection of a mausoleum in the spring. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, the prevailing colors being red and white—Confederate colors, and were an attestation of the high esteem in which the deceased was held by his large number of friends.

Former Paris Man Gets Appointment.

Friends of Mr. C. E. Nippert in this city will be gratified to learn of his appointment as a Director of the Chamber of Commerce in Cincinnati. The appointment was made Saturday by Mayor Hunt and Mr. Nippert after receiving the oath of office yesterday entered upon his duties.

Mr. Nippert is a son of Mr. P. Nippert, of Paris, and for several years has been a resident of the Queen City. He is one of the recognized business men of that city and his appointment to the office is an attestation to his business integrity. Mr. Nippert is one of the many old Paris boys who are making good in their adopted homes.

Boys' Work Institute in Session Here.

The Boys Work Institute conducted by representatives of the Y. M. C. A., began its session in this city Saturday night when a conference between the State and local workers was held at the Public Library and was presided over by Mr. P. C. Dix, of Louisville. The meeting was full of interest, although the attendance was reduced to a minimum by reason of the cold weather.

All religious interests were centered in the work Sunday. Mr. W. C. Paige, of Louisville, presented the problems attending boys' religious life at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning, and the pastor Dr. Shive, expressed his full sympathy with any movement that would make Christians of the boys.

At the Christian church Mr. E. S. Woosley read a Scripture lesson about the boy life of Christ, and Mr. Dix made a strong address along the line of boys' work.

In the afternoon there was a meeting for boys at the Baptist church, which was addressed by Mr. Woosley and Mr. Lee M. Terrell, secretary of the Student Branch of the Y. M. C. A. The boy cornetist, Cecil Noe, of Lexington, was present and added interest to the occasion.

At the same hour there was a meeting at the Christian church for all interested in the movement with Mr. Dix presiding. A talk on "Characteristics of Boy Religion" was ably given by S. A. Harris, of Frankfort. "The Responsibility of Adults for Boy Leadership" was discussed by Mr. Paige, followed by an informal discussion, which was entered into by Dr. Shive, Dr. Lydia Pogue, Mr. Houston Rion, Mr. W. O. Hinton and others.

In the evening at 7:30 a union service was held in the Christian church, with Mr. Dix presiding. Special music was rendered by Cecil Noe, the choir, and a male quartette composed of Prof. A. H. Morehead, Messrs. Wm. Stackhouse, Prentice Lancaster and Wallace Clarke.

Stereopticon views of camp life were shown including special views on Camp Daniel Boone on the Kentucky River, and which was the work particularly emphasized during this institute. These were followed by short talks from several Paris boys who enjoyed an outing at the camp last summer, these were Edward Spears, Dan Peed, Jr., Edward Myall, Marmaduke Brown and Denis Snapp, Messrs. Henry Power and W. O. Hinton spoke, endorsing the work.

Pneumonia in Swine.

Just at this season of the year Kentucky is thickly scattered with a fatal disease in hogs. This disease in a majority of cases is hog cholera, but there have been many applications for anti-hog cholera serum where upon investigation we found it was not hog cholera but pneumonia. Pneumonia in swine is a very common disease, and during the winter months especially is very prevalent, and one should be able to distinguish between the primary inflammation in the lobes, lobules and connective tissues of the lungs—pneumonia—and hog cholera, which frequently shows a secondary pneumonia in combination with lesions well indicative of hog cholera. A differential diagnosis of these two diseases in swine is not always possible before death, and a postmortem is therefore necessary. It is true that in hog cholera pneumonia often exists, but always as secondary pneumonia; however pneumonia may occur alone as a primary infection.

In pneumonia congested areas are found in the lungs, sometimes of a bright red tinge but often of a dark grayish red. In some places they are black with pockets of pus (gangrene). This latter condition is found in secondary pneumonia, consequent upon cholera, as well as in primary pneumonia. Where cholera exists the lung hemorrhages are present also in the form of small pin-point hemorrhages. Also in this case the cholera lesions are prominently developed in the alimentary tract. These points serve to distinguish the two conditions, whether existing alone or simultaneously. When the two exist together the pneumonia is secondary and contracted after the cholera has lowered the vitality.

Pneumonia in swine passes through the same stages as in other domestic animals and in man, accompanied by symptoms practically the same, if correctly interpreted. Mechanical pneumonia is frequent in hogs and is caused by direct irritation, such as medicinal liquids in the form of drenches which lodge in the lung tissues; by dust and dirt constantly inhaled from dusty sleeping quarters; by external wounds or portions of fractured ribs penetrating the lung tissue; from housing in ill ventilated stables, necessitating the constant inhalation of foul air, which is insufficient in oxygen to nourish the body and results in pulmonary stagnation and congestion. The animal exhibits a chill, often passing unnoticed, followed by fever, which is indicated by dullness and drowsiness; increased breathing and dry cough, with almost complete loss of appetite. Many cases in the early stages can be checked by the use of peson salts, 1 oz., and calomel 2-10 gr. Aconite tinc. 4-15 m. and veratrum viride fluid 2t-30 gr. are good for their fever reducing property and their effect upon the vascular system, and should be combined with stimulants and tonics, such as whiskey, ginger, alcohol and brandy. Laudanum, 1-4 dr. should be given to keep aconite and veratrum from producing vomiting. In the convalescent period ammonium carbonate, 15-40 gr., or turpentine are used as expectorants. The treatment for pneumonia should in the first place be prevention by removing the cause, which is frequently due to exposure and changeable climatic conditions. During the early spring or late fall when hogs are improperly housed or sheltered it is not uncommon for them to die from this trouble. It is sometimes the result of catarrh brought on by slight exposure to cold.

Tax Judgment Given.

In the Fayette County Court Saturday Revenue Agent Miles P. Rehorn was given a judgment against Simon Wiel, well known here, by Judge Percy Scott. The judgment holds that the defendant is liable to taxes on notes, cash and stock in foreign corporations valued at $10,000 for the tax years of 1906-1910. The tax, penalty and costs amounted to the sum of $582.

Millersburg Boy Gets Position.

His work will be to enlist the interest in dairy farming among the farmers along the line of the Southern railway, and his headquarters will be in St. Louis. Mr. Ball has specialized in animal husbandry and dairying in his college course and has since been employed in the live stock department of State University. He was an honor graduate and was highly recommended by the college authorities.

Paris in Grip of King Winter.

Paris is firm in the grip of King Winter and Saturday morning the coldest day of the present season was recorded when the mercury went to a point between twelve and fifteen degrees below zero as indicated by various thermometers throughout the city.

The heavy snow which fell Thursday night covered the ground to a depth of seven inches on the level and in many places drifted to a depth of two feet. Roads leading to this city from out in the county were rendered almost impassable and the streets were in such condition from the heavy snow fall that the city hands were busily employed all of Friday with teams in clearing the snow off the sidewalks and making paths for pedestrians.

Saturday morning the coldest weather of winter prevailed occasioning much suffering and continued throughout the day. Sunday a rising temperature afforded some relief, and the mercury in some places reached the freezing point, only to be sent downward again by a cold wave Sunday night, and yesterday hovered around the twelve degree mark. The city hands were engaged yesterday with the street sweeper in removing the snow from the gutters.

The weather indications for today point to a slight relief from the present situation and it is to the effect that today will be fair with a slowly rising temperature.

Human Blood as Printer's Ink.

It is said that Faust carried a number of his "Mazarine" Bibles, so called because a copy came first to the knowledge of modern booklovers from the library of Cardinal Mazarin, to Paris about 1455-56 and sold one to the king for seven hundred crowns, about $840; and another to the archbishop of Paris for six hundred crowns, say $720. On comparing their purchases they wondered at the exquisite accuracy and uniformity of the text, and on learning that other copies had been sold at from five hundred to six hundred crowns each, which on comparison proved to be exact duplicates, it was considered impossible for merely human skill to produce such masterpieces of penmanship. The red ink used to rubricate the illuminated parts was also of such brilliancy and "body" that it was promptly suspected to have been composed of human blood, and Faust was apprehended on a charge of sorcery, and only escaped the fagots and the stake by revealing his secret.

The tradition that Doctor Faust was a magician who had sold his salvation to the devil, probably arose from this story of which his competitors, the copyists, took all the advantage possible. It is told of one medieval printer that having been set to work upon a geometrical work in which various figures were inserted, he became convinced that he was making a book of magic which had been composed under the direct inspiration of the devil. Thereupon he remonstrated with his employer and told him that he could not consent to imperil his salvation by finishing his task. His master insisted upon his continuing his work, but in spite of ridicule and argument, the poor fellow became so agitated that he fell sick and died in the belief that his misfortunes were due to the fact that he had taken part in an unholy and illegal enterprise.—"The Printer and Publisher," Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine for January.
